As far as professional, my mantra has always been that the well groomed person with long hair is more likely to be professional than the guy with short hair. Takes patience and discipline with long hair... short hair is lazy and a good way to waste money and valuable natural heat in the winter.</td>

HD DVD cracks: there's no going back

Last night, the AACS LA's attempts to keep an HD DVD crack under wraps backfired in a spectacular fashion. Pandora's Box is now wide open and there's no going back now.

...in order for Digg to survive, it must abide by the law.

...we decided to comply and remove the stories with the code.

Digg users right to freedom of speech, 50,000+ digs strong!!

I calculated the overall number of digs (and counting), of stories one way or the other related to the HD-DVD story, that made it to the front page and were submitted just after Digg's own "Digg: What's Happening with HD-DVD Stories?" post submission and here are the stats: More than 50K+ digs overall and more than 45K+ digs on the front page.

HD-DVD key fiasco is an example of 21st century digital revolt

It's the most circulated number of the week. Sixteen hexadecimal digits that unlock the wonder of most currently released HD-DVD titles from the early clutches of the AACS revenue content protection system. Sixteen digits that have been posted in so many places — and in many cases, removed only to be reposted — that they're hard to avoid.

DiggNation - HD DVD Wins

LOL. I love it! I welcome incoming key spam.

Why All The Censorship? HD-DVD Has Digg In Its Pocketbook.

DiggNation episode 76 from December 14, 2006 featured HD-DVD as a primary sponsor. See for yourself. I doubt we'll all be seeing this legal and corporate ass kissing via bannings and censorship if the encryption key involved any other company that wasn't a sponsor. A site willing to not fight it is not worth surviving anyways.

HD DVD Encryption Hacked!

It looks like someone finally did it! "BackupHDVD is a tool to decrypt a AACS protected movie that you own, so you can play it back later using an HDDVD player software."

Google & blogs issued with AACS Cease & Desist

Following the widespread publicity of the AACS hack, especially with working out the HD DVD processing key, the AACS LA has started sending out Cease and Desist...
If we lose, then what the hell, at least we died trying.
But now, after seeing hundreds of stories and reading thousands of comments, you’ve made it clear. You’d rather see Digg go down fighting than bow down to a bigger company. We hear you, and effective immediately we won’t delete stories or comments containing the code and will deal with whatever the consequences might be. More...
